

Političke PERSPEKTIVE

AUTHOR GUIDELINES

The journal Political Perspectives is grounded in political research, but although its focus is within political science, it is not disciplinary bound. As the main idea is to emphasize professional and academic research of politics, the journal welcomes texts of related disciplines (law, sociology, philosophy, economics, communication, etc.) in which such an attitude is cultivated. The submission of papers from various political science subdisciplines is encouraged, as well application of various theoretical and methodological approaches. It is crucial that submitted articles meet the criteria of scientific excellence and relevance.

Political Perspectives are published twice a year (in June and December). Political Perspectives are an open access journal. Authors are not charged any fees for submitting or for publishing the paper. After publication, authors may publish their work, in the form of a submitted version, accepted version or published version of the manuscript, within any repository, within obligatory referencing that the article was published in Political Perspectives. Authors retain copyright.

Political Perspectives publish original scientific articles, review articles, research notes, professional papers, reactions to published articles, translations of relevant articles onto Croatian or Serbian and book reviews. Original scientific articles contain comprehensive original research. Research notes are scientific articles with new results of scientific research which require rapid publication, but still do not have full verification of results or comprehensive interpretation. Review articles provide a concise and critical overview of an area of research and contain the author's original perspective of the state of the discipline, approach, or topic. The categorization of the paper is proposed by the reviewers, and the final decision, based on the reviews, is made by the editorial board.

Political Perspectives publish peer-reviewed articles in English, Croatian and Serbian. All submitted manuscripts are first evaluated by the editors, who then send them into double-blind review procedure. Prior to the review, submitted manuscripts are checked for plagiarism (with PlagScan software). The submitted articles must be an original author's work that has not been already published or submitted for publication to another journal (except for translations). The review procedure takes 4 to 6 weeks, and the goal of the journal is to have a final decision on each submitted manuscript within 90 days from its submission. If necessary, certificates of accepted article are issued to authors before the publication.

It is necessary to enclose an anonymous manuscript (without any information about the authors), and to enclose a separate document with the title of the paper, name and surname of all authors, their institutional affiliation, ORCID numbers, contact information (address, e-mail, telephone), keywords (up to five) and summary. The summary (up to 200 words) must clearly indicate the aim of the paper, the topic of the paper, the methodology or approach used, the findings of the paper and the contribution of the acquired insights. If the paper is not in English, it is necessary to additionally enclose a summary and keywords in English. Authors must declare a conflict of interest. The preferred length of a scientific article is 6,000 to 10,000 words, including list of sources, tables, appendices, and notes, and up to 5,000 words for book reviews. It is necessary to consult with the editorial board before sending book reviews. Political Perspectives follow the APSA citation style, which uses an "author-date" model with parenthetical citations (see detailed explanations of the journal on the formation of citation and bibliographic items).

Manuscripts are sent to editorial board as word documents via the Open Journal System (OJS) online editing platform at:
